It's time to bust out the beachy pillows and island-scented candles. To update your summer decor, sail straight to Calypso St. Barth Home, which opened this week in Dallas.

If you're shopping for island style on a budget, Target will introduce a Calypso St. Barth collection Sunday.

The new home store just opened around the corner from its sister apparel boutique at Preston Center Plaza. According to company president Stefanie DeRusso Smith, the clothing location's small collection of home goods used to fly off the shelves, so the brand decided to make Dallas the site of its third free-standing furnishings shop.

Calypso St. Barth is known for artisan items. Look for jewel-based garden lanterns, Moroccan wedding blankets, and furnishings with a breezy, bohemian flair. Labels include Maison de Vacances bedding and Heidi Merrick textiles as well as leather poufs, wool dhurrie rugs (in loads of colorful hues and bold patterns up to 11-by-18 feet), picture frames, coffee-table books and candles.

One-of-a-kind chairs and custom handmade dining tables will also be available "for Dallas' legendary dinner

Calypso St. Barth items, including this plate, $3.99; cereal bowl, $3.49; and tumblers, $3.49 and $3.99, will be at Target starting Sunday.

This serving platter will be available at Target for $12.99.

Prices start around $60 for a cozy throw and go to $2,000-plus for carpets.

Target's capsule Calypso St. Barth collection, which will be available Sunday through June 5, includes home goods and fashion for women and kids.

The Target line includes bright and beachy tabletop items in shades of turquoise and pink, candles and even a pouf in silver or gold, for $69.99.

Items will be in stores and at target.com, with prices ranging from $2 to $80.
